

MacDowall of Ancient Galloway tartan

The Clan MacDowall Tartan:

The tartan of Clan MacDowall of ancient Galloway was designed by the Chief who registered it with the Scottish Tartans authority in 2007. The overlays and colors conform to the plain Arms of ancient Galloway carried by the Chief. In it, the gold-crowned white lion symbolically romps on the shore of the blue Irish Sea that surrounds the Rhinns of Galloway. The clan's plant badge of oak is represented by the crossing green bands with white over strips to symbolize the widespread family.

Fabric:

The material is a 14 oz, 100% wool fabric.

Size:

The material is 60 inches (5 feet) in width. This is considered a double-width length. Typically a seat measurement of up to 46" would take 4 yards of double wide material for a male's kilt and anything greater than 46" would take 4.5 yards or more to get a good finish. Female kilts require less material. Please confirm with your kilt maker before ordering.

Price:

Current price quotes are available upon request.
